You are rationally guided to philosophize the meaning of writing for the realization of your individual concreteness in the future.

Toshiyuki Namai

To all the students I deeply love here in this Ginza sanctuary, at first, I'd like to ask you the following question:

“Seriously, have you ever considered ‘the meaning of writing’ in the language, namely the Japanese language?”

Intellectually speaking, to rigidly write some words in Japanese is not the meaning of just writing something concrete you need in Japanese.

Fundamentally, when you write something, you are bound to consider what you are going to write beforehand.

As to the matter of writing in your daily life, you devoutly need to be a deep thinker in the process to write all the time.

Even though you started writing something concrete already, you are still required to deeply consider what you are going to write next in your substantial process to do it.

I'd like you to profoundly philosophize the meaning of writing for the sake of the realization of your individual concreteness in the future. It is true that writing is interpreted as a literal creative activity in this civilized world.

Writing activity gives you a great opportunity for you to be a clear-headed individual bit by bit who possesses potentiality in the future.

◆An intellectual gift from Toshiyuki Namai

Lastly, I shall give you an intellectual gift for your sake. The gift given to you is as follows:

---I'd like you to positively have the discipline below for your fruitful life.---

I'd like you to steadfastly discipline yourself by writing sentences in order to be more intellectual and rational for your individual concreteness. Writing engenders the potentiality for you to be more intellectual and rational in your daily life by inches.
