Dreaming of something unreal engenders nothing

Toshiyuki Namai

<Introduction>

A person who is dreaming of something in his/her heart doesn't realize anything, anything at all. The following poem gives you strength to go forth as a person who takes action.

I'd like you to enjoy experiencing the vicissitudes of your dramatic career very much. Because the harsh realities of life are those which guide you "how to live better."

What you just need is surely "life experience" day after day.

Dreaming of something unreal engenders nothing

Action you take gives you something meaningful

Therefore, I'd like you to take action positively

I'd like you to do a thing which is real

Because only a real thing engenders something meaningful

Imagine now,

Which one gives you a right direction,

Something real or something unreal?

I'd like you to take action according to what you see as a matter of reality

What you see guides you to a reasonable direction

Dreaming of something unreal engenders nothing

I'd like you to continue opening your eyes to see the reality

I'd like you to confront the harsh realities of life

Those realities give you strength to go forth
