

May 8, 2020

English Hills, Ginza
Tokyo, Japan

Unknown power of perceptiveness you individually and unconsciously possess

Toshiyuki Namai

It is absolutely true that an elegant English speaker is usually rich in nuance in his/her expressions. He naturally possesses "some sort of finesse" which is sharply sophisticated.

Mostly, such sophisticated finesse is admirably built through having a lot of feeling experience sensitively in his heart. Feeling the things sensitively engenders an opportunity for human beings to be "more perceptive" in the presence of so many things facing and experiencing.

In general, "perceptiveness" you individually possess in the presence of the things decisively destines the two, 1) the quality and 2) the direction of your English very much more than you ignorantly imagine.

The point is that you are required to substantially experience so many delicate matters and sentiently feel them in your daily life in the process to learn English rationally directed by your teacher, Toshiyuki Namai. Because the experience of life performs fruitfully as your great mother for the sake of the realization of valuable learning and development.

Essentially speaking, everyone possesses “latent ability” in him. This latent ability is called “potentiality.”

“The concept of potentiality” is different from “the concept of possibility” which is simply treated by people in general. “Possibility” is the one people can recognize without any difficulty. But, “potentiality” is the one people normally can not recognize so easily. Because potentiality internally exists in every human being silently.

Your teacher, Toshiyuki Namai is a being who has a keen eye for potentiality a student internally possesses. He absolutely does try to do “his best” to find and see student's potentiality through his teaching all the time.

It is a wise idea for you to place yourself in his heart in the process to learn various intellectual matters from him. Because “doing it brilliantly” without any stumbling block between you and him is the best way for receiving his extraordinary guidance regarding your potentiality you don't know yet for your future sake.